

Kyler Theis
Government
Mrs. Wuelfing

How does the Constitution preserve our freedom and why is that important to me?

The constitution preserves our freedom because it shows lots of things. Like the First Amendment is freedom of speech. That means a lot to me because it means a lot to me. It also means so much to me because if I can't talk freely then I will be worried about saying some of the things I want to say. I think that all the Amendments are super important but the one that speaks to me the most is freedom of speech. The part I am talking about specifically is freedom to gather and assemble. I think this is important because if you can't gather and talk or anything it would be difficult to protest without that.

The Freedom to gather is big because if people can't gather it means no one could protest because protesting is a big thing like people use that so that they could get the word out there. The freedom of speech is also the freedom to protest the government is big because if people couldn't protest the top of the government because that is going to be the best way to get your word out there."In Sudan, protest movements brought about direct change in government last year. People who were actively protesting on the streets are now part of that government." This is saying they were trying to change something and they got their way because they got put in government so it shows that if you want to make a change it can happen if you protest the right way.

One of the other things that is big in this conversation would be that when people protest in the wrong way it can go bad. "Last Wednesday, Marcell Harris was hit by a rubber bullet. He had joined the second day of protests in this city over the killing of George Floyd, a black man who died after a police officer kneeled on his neck for more than eight minutes while bystanders filmed." This is showing that protesting can go bad if it's done wrong. Like if someone hits a police officer it could have the whole protest. I think that people need to be smart because they can mess up everything they are fighting for. If someone overreacts and starts fighting cops or something like that the government will probably not listen to what they are fighting for because they want to protect their cops.

If there were no freedom of speech the world would be so different like we would not be able to say what we want to the people of the United States of America. What I mean by that is the government would be the only ones who could change things and the people would have no say in anything. We as the people need to have a say in the world around us because the rich people in the government would only do things to help themselves if we didn't have a say in anything. This is why it is super good that we as people are saying something because we can as of the first amendment.

I think that the first amendment is good but also the 2ed amendment is necessary because we can protest and bear arms so that we have more of a say because if we as people can't bear arms for safety and to protect yourself everyone would just go around stealing from each other with no worries of dying so I think that the first and second amendment are super important because without those two main thing the world we live in would be even more of a mess.

All together I think that all the amendments are invaluable but the ones I talked about are the most important to me because they show that the people can have a say if the government is not doing what the people want. I think the First Amendment is the most important because the people have a say in the government and the Second Amendment is also very important because if we don't have guns we would struggle to protect ourselves from the government. With all that being said I think those are the most important amendments we have.